HAIR-PLUMPING POWDER

The usual volumizing steps—apply a root booster to wet strands, then activate it with a blow-dryer—aren't so useful when you want big sex-kitten hair fast. Cue our obsession with these powders, packed with texturizers like nylon. Shake a bit into your hands, scrunch your roots or ends, and voilà—a bombshell style in seconds!

Sexier Eyes in a Swipe

Like shadows for your eye color, new mascaras contain metallic flecks (like copper for blue eyes, silver for green, and bronze for brown) that intensify irises. Try Physicians Formula Custom Eye Enhancing Duo, $11, L'Oréal Paris Double Extend Eye Illuminator, $11, or CoverGirl Exact Eyelights, $9.

CELEB LOOK

Peekaboo plumes give Hilary an edge.

Fearless Feathers

Many celebs are taking the term peacocking literally, pruning their dos with feather extensions. "A few long ones, placed near the top of your ears, poke through and look really edgy," explains Boston stylist Nicholas Penna Jr., who says most salons now carry them. For about $15, a stylist attaches the feathers to a section of hair with a tiny metal clamp (they'll need readjusting after a month). Earth-toned, like Hilary Duff's, above, or neon, the plumes are specially treated so they can be washed and heat-styled.

SNEAK IN MORE SPF

Layer this sunscreen-spiked makeup over your daily SPF lotion for double the defense.

Stay shine-free all day with this oil-free, face-shielding foundation.

Chanel Vitalumière Aqua Ultra-Light Skin Perfecting Makeup SPF 15, $45

The perfect shimmery pink, this pout protector looks way hotter than basic balm.

Mark Lipclick SPF 15 Color Shine Lipstick in Pinkie, $10
